Teacher Training at Queen Elizabeth's School

Queen Elizabeth's School is once again delighted that the National College for Teaching & Learning has recognised the quality of the teacher training the school offers by allocating QE a record number of training places for September 2018.

Those looking to join the teaching profession can begin their training in a wide range of subjects at QE, who run the training programme together with Exeter University, an Ofsted Outstanding provider.

QE School has been a successful teacher training centre for many years now, with year-upon-year of fantastic results for its trainees. A 100% success rate in trainees then finding employment afterwards is a record which helps the school be a popular choice with those looking to give themselves the best start as they seek a career in teaching.

Rhianna Elsdon, Training Manager, and the lead at QE for the programme said: 'We continue to feel privileged to help shape the teaching profession alongside Exeter University. High-quality on-the-job training is vital for the future of teaching if we are to manage the concerns currently held regarding teacher recruitment. We are proud to be able to train resilient, professional teachers to be of benefit locally and nationally.'

Queen Elizabeth's will have an Open Morning on October 19th where anyone interested in training to teach at the school can attend to receive guidance and a tour of the school and its exceptional facilities. If you are interested in becoming a teacher and would like more details about the QE training programme, or to book on the Open Morning, please contact Rhianna Elsdon at Queen Elizabeth's School: 01202 856372 (direct line) reldsen@qe.dorset.sch.uk
